Aims of the Administration
In his discussion of the policies of the administration, Mr. Hughes said:

"Of course, there have been differences of view, freely expressed. That is a wholesome sign; there have been no attempts to establish a one man rule. The executive has fully appreciated the great powers confided to him by the constitution and he is exercising them.

That is the reason wasteful expenditures have been cut necessary economies enforced, efficiency vastly increased, and our great national concerns safeguarded.

They are due to the nagacity, the steadiness, the inexhaustible energy, the constant labors, the intimate knowledge of human nature as well as of governmental affairs, the immediate and just appraisment of difficult situations, the courtous consideration and kindly disposition, and especially the untiring zeal for the public interest which characterize our chief, Warren G.
